Telecommuting is an integral part of the County's overall compliance with regulations (Rule 2202) as set forth by the South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) to reduce air pollution from employee commutes to and from work.

In January of 1989 the County of Los Angeles Board of Supervisors adopted a Telecommuting Policy as a means toward achieving the "County's regional clean air and traffic reduction goals." Telecommuting standards were adopted formally by the Board in 1990 and added to the Board of Supervisors Policy Manual. The criteria for using telecommuting assumes that the employee commute will be eliminated or reduced by at least 50 percent. In late 1990, there were an estimated 1,200 County employees in 32 departments using telecommuting to complete their work assignments.

The Countywide Telecommuting Program, according to the Board adopted policy, is a management option, not a universal employee benefit. Department Heads may implement telecommuting when it is deemed mutually beneficial by both the department and the employee.

The employee remains liable for injuries to third parties and/or members of the employee's family on the employee's premises.

There are a variety of job functions deemed suitable for telecommuting, including audit reports, data analysis, contract preparation/monitoring, conducting business by telephone, data entry, processing and programming, project oriented work, reading and writing, and word processing. The County may, with reasonable notice, make onsite visits to the employee's home to determine that the work site is safe and free from hazards and to maintain, repair, inspect and retrieve County-owned equipment, software, data and supplies.

The SCAQMD requires the County to keep copious records detailing the number of employees participating in the program, the number of days per week employees work at home or at a satellite center, and any training or orientation sessions that are held in support of the program.

All telecommuters must comply with the County's Telecommuting Standards, which address policy issues related to worker's compensation, use of County equipment, telephone costs, tax implications and other issues deemed appropriate by the County.

Given that we read on a regular basis newspaper articles describing the ever increasing problem of traffic congestion throughout our regional arterial system, I believe it is time for this Board to revisit and reassess the telecommuting policies and determine how useful a tool this is proving to be, who is using it, are there abuses and what can be done to make improvements.

I, THEREFORE, MOVE that this Board instruct the CAO, in conjunction with all county departments, to review, re-assess and return to this Board of Supervisors, by February 22, 2005, with their recommendations for an updated Board Policy for the County of Los Angeles Telecommuting Program.
